

HP PD 200208134-1

ABSTRACT

An improvement in a real time operating system for supporting at least one application, a processor and at least one hardware resource. The operating system includes a power manager layer. Such power manager layer is arranged to exchange information with an application, the processor and at least one hardware resource to provide real time power management responsive to the information.